To the editor:

The Penn East gas pipeline project seeks to install a 30-inch wide pipe from Pennsylvania to Trenton. Certified letters from Penn East are being sent to residents, alerting them that surveyor contractors could be blocking atb properties where the gas pipeline might go.

You may be asked to enter into easements which will give the company rights to your property, in exchange for a little money. Please remember the gas companybs focus is to make money, so it will try to gain permanent access to part of your property as quickly as possible for that purpose. Itbs that simple. Please donbt sign or agree to anything until youbve attended public meetings and heard both sides. Above all, sign nothing until your attorney reviews any documents presented to you and advises you what you could be permanently deeding away.

You have the right to refuse certified mail from the gas company or its affiliates, post your property with bno trespassingb signs, and send certified letters with return receipts to the gas company denying them access to your property, or revoking permission if you already gave it.
